Warm up

Sometimes it's easy to make predictions. For example, what color box would come next?

Why? Black would be a great prediction because it would follow a set pattern, black-grey-grey, black-grey-grey
Some predictions follow an expected pattern based on what you see and hear

MAKING PREDICTIONS

make a guess
based on clues
from the text

You might be correct, or the author might have surprised you!

Jeffery-Basson

Learn

When you predict while reading or watching something, you look for clues. A clue might be one of the following:

- Something an author has said before.
- The author mentions a seemingly important detail.
- In a video, the music might give you a clue.
- Maybe a character has a particular habit to help you predict
- Maybe a location is important
- Is there an item or saying that keeps recurring?

Practice

On the next few slides you will watch two movie trailers for a film called Mary Poppins. After each clip, practice your predicting skills using only the information from the specific clip.

Based on what you see and hear, it will look like you may be seeing two different movies. Keep your evidence in your answers to the current clip you are watching.

You may want to create a chart on your paper like the one on the next slide to help you think about the differences in the two clips.

QUESTIONS

What will it be about?
