Lesson: May 21, 2020

Objective/Learning Target:
Write a competitive Informative speech.

Bell Ringer/Let's Get Started

Yesterday, you began the process of collecting research.

What was the most interesting thing you found or learned?

Lesson/Activity - Organizing your research

Your outline should include:

- Statements you write
- Research you found

Compare this outline to this final draft of a speech written by William Chrisman alum, Nicolette Bowman.

Practice - Write your outline

Using your research document from yesterday, begin reading through your material. As you read, highlight portions of text that you think you might use.

Copy and paste these portions (with links) into the first page of your research document. In other words, you're just moving stuff from your research to fit one of your 3 main points.

When you are done with this step of the process, you'll want to add your statements about what your research proves above the text excerpt.
