Daily Objective:

- Review Storytelling
- Find appropriate, published, and creative literature of different genres and styles
- Utilize online research, library databases, and previewing tools

Bell Ringer/Let's Get Started: Think about a great Storytelling you've seen this year. It could have been from a recorded performance you watched in class or one you saw in a round. What was great about it? What did you like about the story?

Lesson/Activity: Use amazon.com, or barnesandnoble.com to browse based on topic or idea with the limit of "Children's books". You can also find children's books around your house if you have them.

Alternative tip: Take the title of the Storytelling you like from Task 1 and find it on Amazon. Then, scroll to find "Customers who bought this item also bought..." to find similar pieces.

Practice: Pick your top 3 finds and list them. Include:

- How many prospective characters
- Overall topic/moral it addresses
- Short summary of the story

Additional Resources: Utilize YouTube to find Storytelling Performances like this one. (Remember, some of them stand, but all the other rules apply.)
