Andy Warhol was an artist around 450 years after Leonardo Da Vinci. He knew his Pop culture well; the current popular celebrities and items of his time. He used them for his art. But he also knew his history. Have you seen this artwork?

Warhol also did his own version by printing the Mona Lisa in Warhol Screen print style...

This artwork seems radically different from the subtle earth tones of our Mona Lisa. What could they possibly have in common? Take a moment and create a Venn Diagram with a circle for each artwork and the middle being what they have in common.

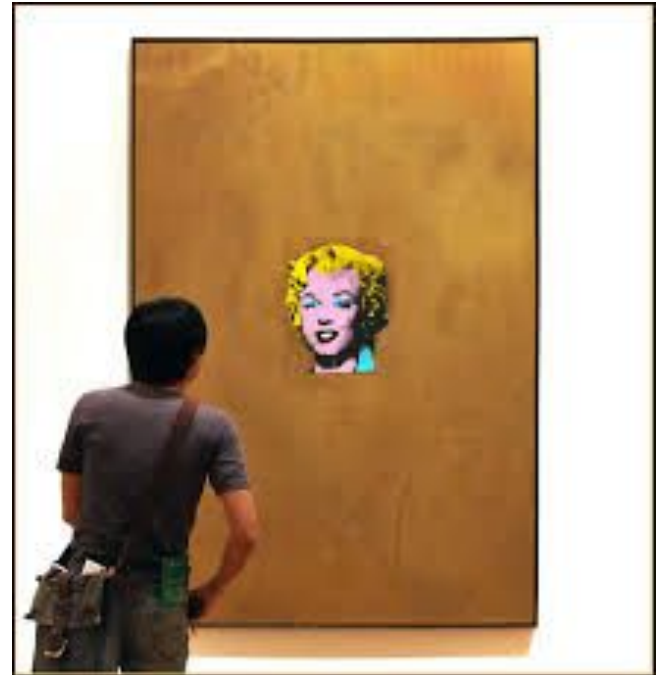

Could not help myself!
I need this for the Art room.

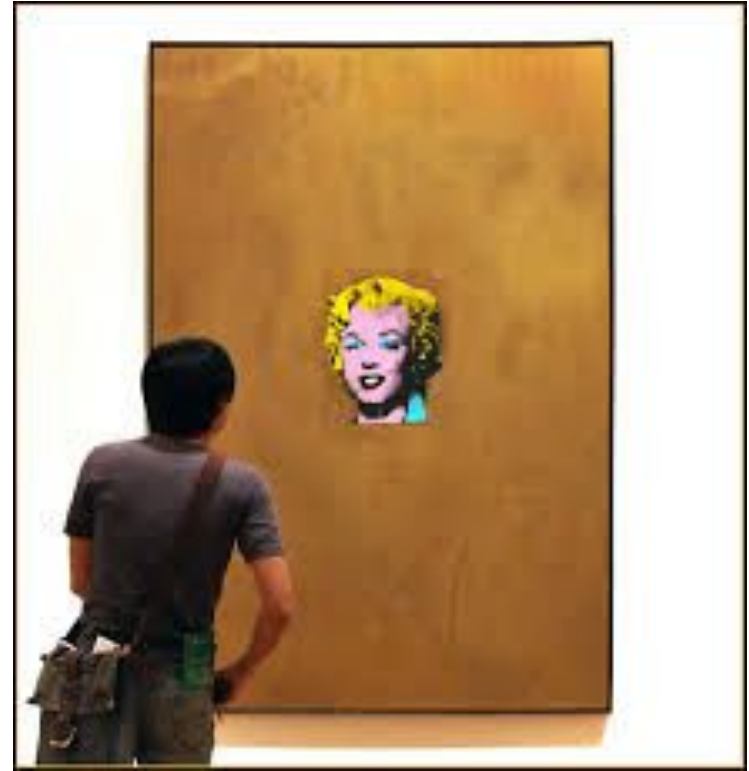

$\frac{3}{4}$ pose, slight smile, similar eyes. Foggy features in some areas. Both women. Both paintings became iconic (famous around the world).

Warhol had multiple versions of his Marilyn. The first, was the gold Marilyn Created right after her Death. Let's finish our day by visiting the painting in the MoMa Museum in New York, New York. After the video, answer the question, Why gold? What inspired him to use this color to honor her.

Answer: Warhol was inspired by religious paintings from his childhood. These paintings were often 'shrouded' in Gold and were in honor of Saints and other biblical people.
