MONDAY

- Learning Target: How are different art mediums made?

How do artists use various media in their work?

What can I create using different art media?

For our final week of online art learning we're going to play with some different materials.

Yes, I said play.

As an artist it is important you are at least familiar with what different materials can do... otherwise how are you going to choose which media to use when you create?

Each day you may either pick something you love to draw, or are good at drawing to use for your subject you may create a non objective image using shapes and lines in the media of the day.

It is helpful to have the same images for these exercises so you can truly compare what the material (media) does instead of comparing the images themselves.

So if you draw a car for today's exercise it's best to draw the same car for tomorrow's exercise... if you are using shapes and lines, it's best to use the same composition (arrangement) of those shapes and lines for each exercise.

Today's media is crayon... you can either do your entire work with only crayon or you can draw in pencil to start then finish in crayon

Artists use crayons in many ways:

...as a resist for watercolor or inks

..as the only media

..as melting
colors on paper, canvas or hot rocks

Loretta Bradfield's media of choice is melted crayon.

Don Marco is sometimes known as "Mr. Crayola" because of his work in crayons.

A close-up photograph of several crayons of various colors. The crayons are arranged in a cluster, with their conical tips pointing upwards. The colors include orange, red, white, purple, green, yellow, blue, and pink. The background is a plain, light-colored surface. Overlaid on the image is the text "What will you create in crayon?" in a bold, white, sans-serif font.

What will you create in crayon?
